Spencer Museum of Art welcomes new exhibit using recycled fabric and other fibers

Written by 6News Staff

The Spencer Museum of Art welcomed a new exhibit. Korean-American artist Ke-Sook Lee creates art using recycled fabric and other fibers. Her childhood in Korea is shown in her work.

Lee is an internationally recognized artist and a major contributor to the Kansas City art movement for more than four decades.

On Monday, Lee spoke with the public about her work and what she tries to accomplish.

The exhibit is called Ode to Sprout 2. It's part of a Spencer exhibit that features new works of art.
